

Profiles as defined in Table 1. Each bar is the normative ceiling for that input level, identical across listeners. The dark segment is the loudness of unamplified speech generated by residual hearing; the light segment is what remains to purchase high-frequency audibility. Percentages give the fraction of the ceiling consumed before any gain is prescribed.